eve, when the sun's dy-ing ray Burns low o'er the mur-mur-ing sweet, dim shadows, at night, Have hid-den its bright - er sea, And bars of gold, soft beam - ing, lay Far down on the darkening grace, — And star-beams..... shower their light A - broad on its tran-quill lea; When trembling sil-ver mists en-veil The flow of the pur-ple face; — When the gift of a whis-per'd charm, Comes drift-ing o'er its tides,..... And faint and far some wan-d'ring sail, On its breast,..... — And the peace of its brood-ing calm, Lulls my sea-ward er-rand rides;.... And faint and far some wand'ring sail, On its wea-ry heart to rest;..... — And the peace of its brooding calm, Lulls my sea-ward er-rand rides.... 'Tis there and then sweet wea-ry heart to rest.....
